In the port of Messina, Sicily.

From the Navigator.

This morning Queen Elizabeth navigated within the confines of the Messina straits before tying up alongside her berth. The straits are characterized by strong tidal currents. Messina is known as the door of Sicily. With its port, shaped like a sickle, it has always been a trading city. Situated close to the Peninsular, there has been busy thoroughfare between Messina and the Mainland, over the centuries.

Nautical fact of the day.

Why do we take a pilot?

A pilot is a qualified coastal navigator, often an ex-sea captain, whose purpose is to assist our bridge in navigating the vessel into or out of port, or through a narrow coastal passage or river. In many ports, local regulations make it compulsory for ships over a certain size take a pilot.

Messina (Missina in Sicilian) is the third largest city on the island of Sicily, Italy and the capital of the province of Messina. It has a population of 250,000 inhabitants in the city proper and about 500,000 in the metropolitan area. A turbulent history of natural disasters and wartime damage has led to much of the city being rebuilt over the years, but there are many treasures of the past that can still be discovered - the port is the gateway to the incredible town of Taormina and the infamous Mount Etna.

Today's activities.

Officer Profile - Chief Electrical Officer Trevor Kneale

I was born in Barrow-in-Furness Lancashire (the last of 6) in 1955 to proud Manx parents. At Senior School and studying O Level Nautical studies I had set my sights on a career in the Royal Navy. My older brother talked me out of it, and as a result I started my apprenticeship with the Central Electricity Generating Board (CEGB) as an Electrical Fitter at the age of 16.

Having completed my apprenticeship and gaining 2 years experience in the power stations and the local shipyard I did get the opportunity to join the Merchant Navy. I sailed around the world with United Arab Shipping Company for 8 years as an Electrical Officer, sailing on General Cargo/Heavy Lift Ships and also Unmanned Machinery Spaces (UMS) Container Ships. I met my wife, Susan during this time. When my wife and I started a family it was time to come ashore.

I worked in the local shipyard as a Senior Commissioning Engineer on the Trident Missile Submarines for 4 years before moving to British Nuclear Fuels at Sellafield (BNFL). Initially I was a Commissioning Engineer for 2 years, I then transferred to the Plant Operational Team as a Multi Disciplinary Team Leader with responsibility for autosampling and ventilation of the new building I helped to commission.

In January, 1995 I had the opportunity to rejoin the Merchant Navy with P&O Princess, the forerunner to Carnival UK. I joined as a 3ETO (3rd Electrical Officer) and it was great to get my hands dirty again "on the tools". I rose up the ranks and became SETO in August 2005. I am very proud to have sailed as SETO with Princess, Ocean Village, P&O Australia, P&O and now I am extremely proud to be working on board Cunard with Queen Elizabeth.

My interests are my family, football, visiting places of historical interest and trying to find the perfect pint of real ale.
