Port Highlights

At 5.30am, Queen Victoria entered the Argostoli Gulf, soon after picking up her local pilot at 5.45am. She rounded the headland towards the pier, coming safely alongside. In the evening, at 6.00pm we expect to let go of our lines and begin following reciprocal tracks from our arrival. Once clear of the gulf of Argostoli, we will set westerly courses towards the Messina straits.

The legendary home of Odysseus (not, as many mistakenly believe, modern-day Ithaca), has had its own fair share of adversity. Cephalonia's capital, Argostoli, was levelled by a powerful earthquake in 1953. Traces of the civilisations who have called it home over the centuries, from the Ancient Greeks to the Venetians, are still to be found though. The town attracts visitors year-round, drawn to its rich history and azure waters. Though Argostoli is known as a holiday destination, real Greek life is found in the charming boutiques, independent taverns and family-run restaurants populating its narrow streets. Cephalonian cuisine is heartier than on the Greek mainland, and though you'll find all the delights of Greek seafood dishes, a slice of meat pie - the local speciality - is a must-try.
