At sea, en route to Southampton

From the Navigator

After leaving her berth in Lisbon yesterday, Queen Anne followed a reciprocal track down the river Tagus, passing back under the Ponte 25 de Abril Atlantic Ocean. The 'Ponte 25 de Abril' has a total length of 2,277m. This bridge has a nickname of 'The Buzzing Bridge' due to the noise the cars make when driving over the steel gratings that form the deck or road surface of the bridge. After disembarking her pilot, Queen Anne set northerly courses to parallel the coast of Portugal out to starboard and will round Cape Finisterre, once again, continuing to the west of the Bay of Biscay. Here the course will be set to the North East pointing towards the French region of Bretagne.

INSIGHTS

10.00am Nancy Appleyard - Language and Communication - Royal Court Theatre, Decks 2 & 3

It's English - Innit? An amble through the English Language

English is a sumptuous, exuberant and dynamic language, but also deviant and wayward. Enjoy an amble through it, relish our mastery of it, observing how we manipulate it for our convenience and pleasure as only true experts can. Forget those school grammar lessons. Instead, enjoy some English idiosyncrasies and smile at some grammatical misdemeanours.

Reliving the Excitement of Travel on Cunard's First Liner

Tracing its roots back to 1840, Cunard was a leader in the pioneering days of marine steam propulsion. Intriguingly, John suggests that it is still possible, in this third decade of the 21st century, to relive the excitement of travel on Cunard's first Liner even though nothing whatsoever remains of Britannia today.
