Port Highlights

Tromsø is delightfully situated on the forest covered municipality of Troms, Norway which lies in Northern Norway. Most of Tromsø, including the city centre, is located on the island of Tromsøya. Tromsøya is connected to the mainland by the Tromsø Bridge and the Tromsøysund Tunnel, and to the island of Kvaløya by the Sandnessund Bridge. The city is warmer than most other places located on the same latitude, due to the warming effect of the Gulf Stream. The city centre of Tromsø contains the highest number of old wooden houses in North Norway, the oldest house dating from 1789. The city is a cultural centre for its region, with several festivals taking place in the summer. The Arctic Cathedral, a modern church from 1965, is probably the most famous landmark in Tromsø. In this modern city in the Arctic, nature and culture go hand in hand. Tromsø has many activities on offer, from an aquarium and several quality museums to the world's northernmost botanical garden. Tromsø is ideal for seeing the Northern Lights and has a modern mix of outdoor activities, a vibrant nightlife, and places to eat local food. The 'Gateway to the Arctic', which Tromsø is sometimes called, used to be the headquarters of seal and walrus hunters and the starting point for several Arctic expeditions.
