At Sea, en route to Heraklion, Greece

From the Navigator

In the early hours of today we cleared the Strait of Sicily, passing Malta on our starboard side to the South, and Sicily to the North. For the remainder of the day, we shall be steaming on an Easterly heading across the Ionian Sea, which stretches 370 miles across from the southeast tip of Sicily to the southern tip of the Peloponnese in Western Greece. We shall pass through the Kythira Strait, before making our approaches towards Crete and the port of Heraklion.

Professor David Sanders - Psychology

"Why do some people believe conspiracy theories?"

A widespread view of people who believe in conspiracy theories is that they are either stupid or psychologically disturbed. David shows how conspiracy ideation is rather more complex than that and probably involves the type of errors in thinking that we all make from time to time.

Eric Knowles - Antiques & Fine Art

Artist Gustave Klimt

'Gustave Klimt and the Road to Modernity' discusses the emergence of the secessionist movement in Vienna from the late 19th into the early 20th century. The focus on Klimt as the leading protagonist is balanced by the inclusion of like-minded architects alongside designers, craftsmen and women. In 1903 their talents found expression in the collective organisation trading as the 'Weiner Werkstatte'
